heaters and radiators, and during World War II it was incorporated into the armament program, allegedly producing parts for "V" weapons. Eighty employees of the Bojda company, together with some furniture, were moved to Chuchelna, and at the present time the factory employs about 300 workers who are working at full speed. The factory is guarded by the SNB and the militia. Production is claimed to consist of electric stoves and heaters, but this appears to be a camouflage of the actual production since the local labor office does not allow any employees of the Bojda firm to change their jobs.

Attachment: Sketch showing location of both factories.
